FUND MANAGERS' COMMENT (CONTINUED)

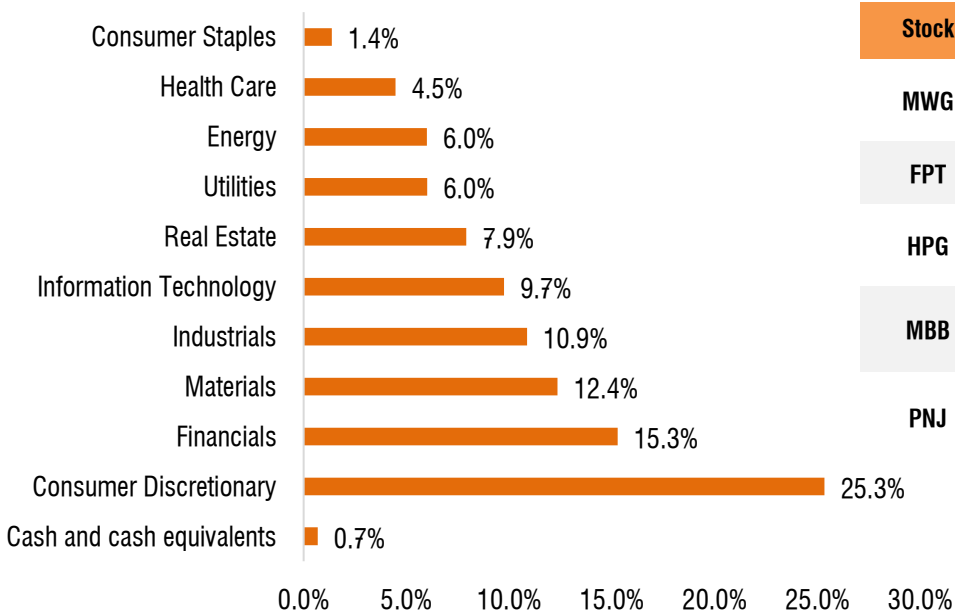

In December, the market was also impacted by poor sentiment of investors following basis trading in November as well as a seasonal foreign investors selling. There was no significant bad news.

The fund's top weights including MWG, HPG, FPT and PNJ yielded positive returns in the month. HPG was one of the few large caps bucking the trend after it hosted an impressive visit to its new USD2.5 bn facilities in Dung Quat. The first blast furnace is running smoothly while the second blast furnace which was launched for testing on November 25, 2019 is already running at 80-90% capacity. As new capacity is coming on stream, HPG continued delivering a 34.7% surge in sales volume in December, bringing YTD 2019 volume to over 2.7 mn tons (+16.8% yoy vs industry level of 5.1%).

We all expect most of our top 10 to deliver decent 4Q results in the forth-quarter coming earnings season. One exception is PHR which fell 27% in December as its conversion of rubber plantation area to industrial park might be delayed. Just a reminder that PHR plans to handover over 1,000 ha to VSIP and Nam Tan Uyen in 2019 and 2020. The company recorded ~ VND300 bn (~USD12.5 mn) in 3Q19 as land compensation income in 3Q19. The stock detracted over 1.6% of our return in December. The stock recovered some ground by the time we prepared this report although there is not yet any official confirmation at company level. In the base case, we are leaning towards a mere delay of the handover which should not affect the company's long run valuation.

The Vietnam story remains intact in 2020 although value investing has been losing ground against passive investing in the past few years. The increase in market capitalization has been outpacing earnings growth most of the time in the past few years which might be attributable to better performance of large caps stock price performance against their earnings growth, leaving an abundant number of more bargain value stocks. Over the long term, we believe stock prices will catch up with this growth and value which is the key strategy of the Fund to strive for high quality company with strong growth potential at reasonable prices.
